

University of Missouri School of Music presents

Music Teachers National Association (MTNA) International Day of Collaborative Music

The University of Missouri School of Music Students and Faculty continue their proud tradition of excellence in chamber music and nationally recognized programming with a concert of collaborative music planned by Dr. Janice Wenger, on Saturday, January 22, 2011, 4:00 PM at Whitmore Recital Hall in the Fine Arts Building. This concert is presented as a part of the 2010-2011 Year of Collaborative Music sponsored by MTNA.

Joining forces with universities, public school systems, community music programs, and diverse collaborative music presenters across the world, the MU School of Music will help draw attention to the importance of collaborative music making in our society and worldwide. Conceived by a collective of MTNA collaborative pianists, The Year of Collaborative Music and the International Day of Collaborative Music Steering Committee is chaired by MU Professor of Piano, Dr. Janice Wenger. "The leadership of MTNA created this project to join forces with other professional music organizations in sharing our collective love of making music together. MU is excited to be a part of the world-wide performances that day," said Dr. Wenger. The International Day of Collaborative Music embraces all age groups, levels of musicianship and genres of music. Partnering organizations include The Royal Conservatory of Music, the College Music Society, European Piano Teachers Association, Canadian Federation of Music Teachers' Association and many more. For a complete list of partners and for more information on MTNA, visit <http://www.mtna.org/>.
